In general, I am against the use of mobile phones aboard aircraft. If they are approved, I believe they should be limited to certain times and/or areas of the airplane. I can't imaging anything worse than being on a red-eye listening to other passengers talking on the phone. I think that the use should be limited to a short duration after take off and before landing.

Thank you,
Janelle Amador